

We are a society built on freedom of choice. If we're willing to pay directly for a service, as long as it's legal, then in a free enterprise society the National Association of Broadcasters should not decide what they think we should listen to. I'm in my fifty's and love my XM Radio and the public services not available in quality on the general radio air ways. I travel a lot and it's much safer driving not to have to keep changing the channels as I go along to keep the same entertainment and traffic & weather services at my touch. The NAB's should come up with their own satellite radio station to compete with XM Radio. I will never to back to the plain old radio stations.

Sincerely
